

EARLY CHILDHOOD EDUCATION – MONTESSORI EMPHASIS

As educators search for effective ways to teach children from all levels of society, Montessori education has demonstrated that it can meet the needs of both inner-city and suburban children. Public and private school systems across the country have embraced Montessori principles and have found new hope for their students. As this global discovery continues, the demand for Montessori educators will continue to increase.

Undergraduate students at Lander University majoring in early childhood education may add the Montessori emphasis by completing 18-additional hours in Montessori methods. Students must be fully admitted to the teacher education program and be recommended by the Director of the Montessori program to enroll in Montessori classes at Lander University.
