SPANISH

Students majoring in Spanish have the opportunity to develop an appreciation of the diverse culture constitution of the Spanish speaking peoples. The Spanish major includes the study of the literary, spoken and cultural expressions of Hispanic civilizations in order to develop writing, speaking, listening and reading skills in Spanish. The program is designed to provide students with skills and knowledge that will prepare them for a variety of career options.

Many agencies in the federal government rely on professionals with intermediate to high-level competence in foreign languages. American multinational corporations and nongovernmental organizations need people with foreign language abilities. U.S. ability to compete effectively in global markets means that more and more businesses deal with companies in other countries. They need employees who can communicate in foreign languages and understand other cultures.
